Spotting the Signals: Signs You May Need Partial Hospitalization in Rehab

by arrowwoodatc | Mar 27, 2024

If you're struggling with addiction, it can be hard to know when the time is right to reach out for help in a structured environment. Understandably, shifting from living life independently into treatment and recovery can be difficult – learning about your triggers and developing healthier ways of managing them is a process.

But if you find yourself stuck, spinning out of control, or in an unhealthy habit cycle that includes relapse – the odds are high that you may need partial hospitalization in rehab.

We will discuss identifying the signs that signal the need for more involved rehab care; like getting professional psychological support, general wellness education, nutrition classes and guidance around social-related issues—so keep reading!

Overview of Partial Hospitalization Programs (PHPs)

PHPs provide intensive treatment through a structured program while allowing the patient to return home in the evenings. During a PHP, patients can expect a combination of therapy, counseling, medication management, and support groups.

Additionally, PHPs offer a less restrictive alternative to inpatient treatment while still providing a high level of care. With the support and guidance of medical professionals, patients will be able to work towards improving their mental and emotional well-being in a safe and nurturing environment.

Warning signs of substance abuse

Recognizing the warning signs can be the first step in preventing addiction from taking hold. Some of the indicators to look out for in a loved one or yourself include changes in behavior, such as:

- increased secrecy
- mood swings
- lack of motivation
- withdrawal from social activities
- changes in sleep patterns
- loss of interest in hobbies or activities once enjoyed
- poor hygiene and appearance

increased secrecy, mood swings, and lack of motivation. Physical signs, such as bloodshot eyes, trembling hands, and sudden weight loss or gain, can also be red flags. If you suspect substance abuse in yourself or someone close to you, it's essential to seek help immediately.

Reasons why you may need partial hospitalization

This is where partial hospitalization in rehab can be incredibly beneficial. There are a variety of reasons why someone might need this level of care, including severe addiction, dangerous withdrawal symptoms, or a co-occurring mental health disorder.

Partial hospitalization offers intensive therapy and support in a structured environment, without the constraints of full hospitalization. It is a great option for those who need a high level of care, but still want to maintain some independence and flexibility.

Benefits of PHPs compared to other forms of rehabilitation

What sets PHPs apart is their focus on providing intensive treatment while allowing patients to return home or to a sober living facility at the end of the day. This offers significant benefits compared to other forms of rehabilitation, such as:

- The ability to receive treatment while still maintaining daily responsibilities and commitments
- A more affordable option compared to inpatient treatment
- The opportunity to practice coping skills and healthy behaviors in real-life settings
- The ability to build a supportive network outside of the rehabilitation center

PHPs give patients the flexibility to continue with their daily routines while receiving the necessary care and support they need to break free from addiction.

How to talk to a doctor or therapist about seeking PHP treatment

Feeling overwhelmed and anxious while talking to a doctor or therapist about seeking PHP treatment is completely normal, but it's important to remember that they are there to help. It may be helpful to write down your thoughts and concerns beforehand so you can clearly express them during the conversation.

Remember to be open and honest with your healthcare provider about how you're feeling and why you believe PHP treatment could be beneficial for you. Don't be afraid to ask questions or voice any hesitations. Together, you can create a treatment plan that meets your unique needs and goals.

Final thoughts on the importance of seeking PHP treatment when needed

However, it is important to remember that addiction is a disease, and seeking treatment for it is critical for recovery. This is especially true when it comes to PHP treatment, as it can provide the necessary level of support and care for those struggling with addiction.

Through PHP treatment, individuals can receive intensive therapy, medication management, and other services tailored to their needs. It is important to prioritize your health and well-being, and seeking PHP treatment can be a crucial step on the path to recovery.
